Shy kittens and adult cats often need extra time and attention to learn to trust people and become the friendly pets that families seek to adopt.

The Purrfect Pals Cat and Kitten Connection prison foster program matches under-socialized cats and kittens to foster dads at the Monroe Correctional Complex’s Special Offenders Unit, a unit specialized to provide residential mental health care to incarcerated individuals.

The program was started in 2006 as a partnership between the Purrfect Pals rescue non-profit organization staff, volunteers from the community and Department of Corrections staff sponsors.

Sean has been a member of the Purrfect Pals group since 2010. He notes that the collaboration between the community and staff is vital. “The Purrfect Pals staff and volunteers are very much needed and greatly appreciated. It is a blessing to be part of a team working together to help the kittens and adult cats to become socialized so they can get a loving forever home,” Sean explains.

Foster Dad Thomas observes, “I had a cat/kitten that was hissing at everyone. Then, after a few weeks the cat became very playful.” It is not unusual for cats to react this way to a new environment and new people.

Sean notes that these types of kittens benefit the most from this program because they are “loved and cared for, some for the first time. [The cats] learn to trust humans so they can be adopted to a forever home. Seeing a kitten change from semi-feral or feral to a socialized kitten that can be handled is very rewarding.”

Daniel reports that he enjoys working with under-socialized and semi-feral cats the most. He says, “The best part to me is getting the tough cases and gaining their trust. I see a correlation to those of us who grew up in broken homes. We are difficult people to get close to and we don’t trust too easily. Yet once trust is gained, you’ve got it. This is similar to the cats I have fostered. Lots of love, care and special attention go a long way.”

During Washington State’s COVID-19 Stay-at-Home orders, volunteers were not able to join the staff in cat care and adoption counseling. As soon as Snohomish County was open to Phase 2, volunteers have been returning to the shelter. They wear masks unless working alone in a room.

Kitties like George Chestnut were excited to welcome back volunteer Todd Laffoon (pictured left), who has been a member of the cat care volunteer team since 2018 and works at least a couple of shifts each week at the Arlington Shelter cleaning sanctuary rooms and preparing evening meals.

All incarcerated individuals who want to participate in the program have to demonstrate behavioral and psychiatric stability before they can apply for the program. Russell says, “[The program] shows that we are here doing something positive with our lives and the lives of the cats.” Caring for pets can be very helpful for people’s mental wellness.

Sean attests to this experience. He says that “I have benefited a great deal from the program. It has been very therapeutic; it has helped me with my major depression and post-traumatic stress disorder. Being able to love and care for a kitten or adult cat is very rewarding.” After just one week in the program, Gary says he can already tell a difference. “[The program] has a positive influence on the whole unit, not just the cat handlers. My specific issue – depression, is better."

People in the program have a chance to learn more about themselves as they are caring for the cats. Gary, who has been in the program since 2006, notes, “Even though we can start out life insane, we can learn to be sane and learn to love in place of hate.” Gary reported the program allows him to be “learning patience and love.”

The program also gives incarcerated individuals a chance to give back to others and their communities. Daniel says, “This program allows me to, in a way, pay it forward by showing these cats love and care in hopes that they become someone’s best pet friend.”

Russell says, “[The program] helps me feel a part of something. I’m happy to help out where I can. It feels like I’m doing a community service, like giving back.”

How Incarcerated Individuals Benefit

Most incarcerated individuals are motivated by the opportunity to participate in this group. Some have had to make major changes in their life to be eligible for this unique experience.

“This program was one of the driving motivations to get my act right when I was housed in segregated confinement. It took lots of work, but I achieved this goal and these cats are a driving force behind my commitment to remain out of trouble,” Daniel reflects.

Helen: Super Hero Mama

by Crystal Chiechi, Outreach Manager

Our 2020 Spring Kitten Shower and Open House had to be canceled at the very last minute due to the COVID-19 health crisis. In a pinch, we switched it to a two week long “Virtual” Kitten Shower event at the end of March. We asked our community to purchase items off our Amazon Smile Wishlist and were extremely pleased and humbled by the overwhelming response from our generous supporters.

The kitten food, litter, milk replacement, toys, and other items that were purchased filled the shelves in our Foster Office. These essential supplies support the many mama cats and kittens welcomed by our shelter and foster families every year during the spring and summer months.

When we were contacted by the Everett Animal Shelter in early June to see if we could take in a young pregnant stray Calico, we knew we were equipped to give her and her future babies the love and care they so desperately deserved! Our Foster Manager Susan Bark even had the purrfect foster family all lined up: Gail and Chris Rautmann.

Gail and Chris only take in kittens with or without their mamas and have now fostered over 61 cats and kittens for Purrfect Pals since 2017. With their most recent litter being adopted out in May, their kitten room was open and they were only too happy to take in this gorgeous pregnant mama named Helen.

Having front row seats to a pregnant mom on the verge of giving birth was a first for the Rautmanns. Their faithful kitten fans watched with baited breath on their Facebook page as they posted pictures of Helen getting bigger and bigger by the day. Finally, on June 22nd, the Rautmanns were alerted by their two cats who sensed that something BIG was happening! Helen gave birth to an incredible EIGHT(!) healthy kittens. The Rautmanns’ nephew was tasked with coming up with their names and since we’ve all had to don masks lately, he decided they should be named after masked superheroes: Mama is Helen (aka Mrs. Incredible, Elastigirl); kittens are Violet (from The Incredibles), Dash (from The Incredibles), Selina (Catwoman), Otis (Rat Catcher from Batman), Bruce Wayne (Batman), Harley Quinn (from Batman), Roary (Ragman from Arrow comics), and Katana (from Batman).

Once the kittens are big enough, mama and all her babies will be spayed or neutered and ready to find their forever homes. Without our generous supporters and wonderful foster families like the Rautmanns, Helen and her precious babies would be facing an uncertain future.

We need more fosters like Gail and Chris! If you are interested in becoming a foster parent please reach out to Susan at foster@purrfectpals.org.
Purrfect Pals Says “Hello” to Havarti

by Crystal Chiechi, Outreach Manager

Due to the support of our Purrfect Pals’ community, we are frequently able to say “yes” when our local shelter partners reach out to us asking for help. This is what happened recently when the Camano Animal Shelter Association (CASA) contacted us about a young female cat named Havarti.

While her three litter mates were healthy and able to be re-homed, the little orange and white cutie named Havarti had a few medical challenges when she was surrendered as a kitten to CASA in July of 2019. Havarti had an injury to her hind end that left her tail hanging limp. Havarti needed more time for the shelter to figure out exactly what was going on with her.

Upon further vet examination, it was determined that Havarti had nerve damage to her spinal cord which limited the sensation in her back end and try as she might, Havarti unknowingly dropped urine and fecal matter outside of her litter box. Because of the loss of sensation, she wasn’t grooming herself properly and was also prone to Urinary Tract Infections.

Despite the challenges she faced, Havarti’s loving, playful spirit always shined through and she quickly became a favorite at CASA. The staff at CASA and her foster family did everything necessary to treat her condition, including wiping her down twice a day. At the end of 2019, it was determined that the best move for Havarti would be to amputate her tail to ensure her hind end would stay as clean as possible and hopefully help prevent further infections.

A few months after she healed up from her tail surgery, CASA reached out to Purrfect Pals to see if we would be able to take over Havarti’s care. With her special urinary diet and daily “wipe-downs”, Havarti would indeed benefit from the specialized feline medical treatment Purrfect Pals has the resources to offer.

Havarti was transferred to Purrfect Pals in May and is now enjoying being the kitty queen in a sanctuary room of her very own, pouncing on wand toys and cuddling to her heart’s content, while our dedicated vet staff and cat care team carefully monitors her health.

Orange and white cutie Havarti arrived at Purrfect Pals in May 2020

Kitties with special diets and medical needs like Havarti and our other medical care residents will have longer stays with Purrfect Pals. Please consider sponsoring Havarti or one of our infirmary cats by contacting Shawnna at sponsor@purrfectpals.org.

Say “cheese” Havarti!

THUNDER THE WONDER CAT

by Jessica Rockstad, Adoptions Manager

In May of 2019, a beautiful long-haired cat named Thunder arrived at our shelter! He was one of the cats people would fawn over because of his luscious grey coat and big-bright eyes. As staff got to know Thunder’s personality, we learned two important things: 1) don’t hug the big fluffy cat, even though he looks really really soft; and 2) he will silently judge: “Are you friend or foe?” You will find out his verdict real quick as his gigantic paw gives you a slap.

Then I understood that Thunder would select his own family, and I was perfectly okay with that. Thunder had a lot of admirers come and apply to adopt him. Each of them was leaving disappointed that this big boy would decline to give any sort of affection; in fact, he would judge them and dramatically “sashay” away as if he had better things to do. Some people took that as a challenge and tried to give Thunder more love, which in turn brought them a fresh scratch on the hand and me searching for band aids.

Thunder’s one-year anniversary had come and gone in May. Though he has not been here that long compared to a few other cats at the shelter, it was clear that Thunder was not planning on going anywhere until he deemed a family worthy.

On June 11th, the Matteson family arrived to meet Thunder after a few emails back and forth with me about his personality and diet. The wife, Lori, expressed that she and her husband, John, were very well versed in Maine Coon traits (they had several over the years). They also had no kids at home and a senior dog.

When Lori and John walked in to meet Thunder, he stared them down. If cats could shrug, I am positive he would have! Lori sat down on the ground and Thunder gave her a tentative sniff before leaning his head into her hand for chin scratches and cheek rubs. My eyebrows shot up in surprise; he acted this way with the staff that he knew well, but with a complete stranger? That was unheard of! John and Lori spent 10 minutes with Thunder before agreeing to adopt him.

Thunder is now an Oak Harbor resident. His first night home he spent sleeping in the Mattesons’ bed. He sniffed noses with his new canine brother and deemed him OK...for a dog. Lori told me that Thunder now chirps happily when he sees them and is suspicious when John leaves the room for any length of time and has to investigate his disappearance. Thunder has also claimed all the pillows in the home as his own, especially the ones in the spare room.

Thunder waited a year to pick his family. At Purrfect Pals, we love all of the cats as our own until the “purrfect” forever family comes to take them home.

PEACH COBBLER & K.C.: FIV+ BFFs

Once in a blue moon we get two cats who become best friends while at our shelter. This is what happened with K.C. and Peach Cobbler.

In September 2018, Peach Cobbler was returned to Purrfect Pals because his previous owner was experiencing medical problems and could no longer keep him. Peach Cobbler was diagnosed as FIV+ (Feline Immunodeficiency Virus) and put into our wonderful FIV+ sanctuary room. Peach was a little shy and slow to warm up to strangers, so he would hide from visitors and all of his kitty roommates.

Earlier in 2018, we had another arrival into our FIV+ room, a lanky black and white cow cat named K.C. He came to Purrfect Pals through a local shelter transfer as a stray with a leg injury. Just like Peach Cobbler, K.C. was shy with people and other cats, so when Peach arrived, K.C. found great comfort in snuggling with this new kindred spirit.

K.C. (below) had his leg amputated after arriving as an injured FIV+ stray
A month after his arrival, we noticed that K.C. was continuing to limp and was in discomfort. X-ray films showed that he had a femoral fracture. Our wonderful clinic staff cast his leg, and he was then set on track for healing, or at least that is what we thought.

A few weeks after his cast was taken off, he had another appointment because the leg appeared to have lost ST connection and muscle mass, causing inappropriate movement and lack of function. K.C. was in pain and the decision was made to do an amputation with hip disarticulation. After his surgery, K.C. stayed in the recovery room until he was fully healed and his new BFF (Best Feline Friend) Peach Cobbler moved into the recovery suite for moral support. Once reunited, it was like no time had passed and they got right back to comforting each other. There was no question about it; these two boys were now bonded.

K.C. and Peach Cobbler stayed in the recovery room for three weeks together before being moved back into the FIV+ room with their other roommates. They cuddled, slept and played together every day while waiting for their purrfect family to come adopt them.

Oliver and Aujali came in late December 2018 and both of them were in agreement to adopt a bonded pair! When they walked into the FIV room it was love at first sight; how could you not fall in love with this adorable pair of best friends?!

We often get updates from Aujali about the two feline fellas in her life, and can’t thank her and Oliver enough for opening their hearts to Peach Cobbler and K.C.

The FIV+ cats at Purrfect Pals would like the readers to know: “Love is positive. So are we. Adopt an FIV+ cat today!”
